The whole point of today's beautiful readings is that what we cannot do with our own strength, we can do by turning to Christ. That's what the prostitutes and the tax collectors discovered, and so they were able to repent and change the direction of their lives. That's what the first son in the parable discovered - he repented from his selfishness and found strength to fulfill his duties. That's what the First Reading teaches us so clearly: if we turn away from our sins and turn towards Christ, we shall surely live!
