God became man, not as a warrior, not as a great leader, not as one who will blaze new trails in some new, distant world. He comes as a helpless infant, a sniffing, weeping little child, in need of love, in need of tenderness, in need of a mother and a father to keep him, and to be good to him, and to care for him. Christmas is a wonderful time. It's a day when we experience God's love coming in a special way. And we turn to each other and we feel a certain kind of warmth for each other, and a willingness to forgive each other, perhaps be more patient with each other. Jesus told us to love one another as I have loved you. And if you do that you will change the world.
